Foreword

As Chair of the Board of Trustees, I am honored to present to you the 2024 Annual Report of the UN Voluntary Trust Fund for Victims of Trafficking in Persons. The report not only reflects the impact of the Fund but also highlights the journey and the empowerment of victims whom we strive to serve.

Since its establishment in 2010, the UNVTF has remained steadfast in its mission to deliver critical funding support for frontline civil society organizations providing direct assistance for victims of human trafficking.

Many of our partners in the field operate in the most difficult and under-resourced settings, but their commitment in restoring the dignity and agency of victims is a powerful reminder showcasing to us their resilience and resolve in ensuring that every individual has the right to live free from exploitation and fear of it.

With ongoing global crises and an unstable funding landscape, what is most important for civil society organizations is to feel that they are not alone. And that their struggle and everyday commitment is acknowledged and appreciated.

From trauma-informed care and medical aid to psychosocial support, vocational training, access to legal services and reintegration support, UNVTF-funded projects have directly impacted over 11,000 victims of human trafficking in 2024. The Fund's efforts have been guided by a survivor-centred & trauma-informed approach, ensuring that the voices of survivors are not only heard, but play an important role in shaping the support they receive.

The Board of Trustees and the UNVTF Secretariat remain deeply grateful to all our donors – Member States, private sector partners, and individuals – whose generosity enables this essential work. In this report, you will see the tangible impact of your contributions: lives rebuilt, futures reimagined, and communities strengthened.

With your continued collaboration and compassion, I am sure that we will move closer to a world where trafficking in persons is not only condemned but ultimately eradicated.

I thank you for standing with us! To all survivors, I would like to say: You are not alone. You are at the heart of everything we do.

About UNVTF

Since its establishment in 2010, the UN Voluntary Trust Fund for Victims of Trafficking in Persons (UNVTF) has supported over 215 NGO-led projects across more than 60 countries, directly assisting over 100,000 victims of human trafficking.

Our Mandate

The United Nations Global Plan of Action against Trafficking in Persons, adopted by the General Assembly on 30 July 2010, led to the establishment of the UN Voluntary Trust Fund for Victims of Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children (UNVTF).

The Fund's mandate is to provide humanitarian, legal, and financial assistance to victims of trafficking by supporting specialized non-governmental organizations (NGOs) working on the frontlines. Through multi-year grants, UNVTF empowers civil society organizations worldwide to deliver direct aid and services to victims.

Our Mission

UNVTF supports frontline organizations that provide essential, victim-centered assistance to victims of human trafficking. Its mission is to protect and empower survivors through emergency aid, legal assistance, psychosocial support, education, vocational training, and reintegration services. With a vision of a world where every victim is identified, supported, and given the opportunity to rebuild their life, UNVTF strengthens civil society responses and builds partnerships that ensure no victim is left behind.

Governance Structure

UNVTF is administered by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) and overseen by a Board of Trustees. The Board sets strategic direction, ensures alignment with the Fund's humanitarian mandate, and supervises the grant selection process. The UNVTF Secretariat, based in Vienna, Austria, coordinates operations and provides day-to-day support.

Understanding Our Grant Mechanism

Funding Type	Duration	Budget	Type of Support
Small-size Grants	Up to 12 months	Up to US$ 20 thousand	• Shelter • Medical Care • Clothing • Food • Urgent Support
Medium-size Grants	Up to 24 months	Up to US$ 60 thousand	• Legal Aid • Vocational Training • Education • Psychosocial Support • Reintegration

- Mr. Abdullah Al-Nameh (Qatar) – Adviser to President, Qatar Charity
- Ms. Marijana Savic (Serbia) – Founder and director of ATINA
- Ms. Victoria Nyanjura (Uganda) – Chair, and Founder of Women in Action for Women
- Ms. Mira Sorvino (USA) – UNODC Goodwill Ambassador, actor, and activist
- Ms. Mariana Ruenes (Mexico) – Founder and President of SINTRATA

UNVTF Board members together with Ms. Ghada Fathy Ismail Waly, Executive Director of the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime and Director-General of the United Nations Office at Vienna (third from right)*

In accordance with Article 38 of the United Nations Global Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Persons, UNODC administers UNVTF, with the guidance of a five-member Board of Trustees appointed by the UN Secretary-General.

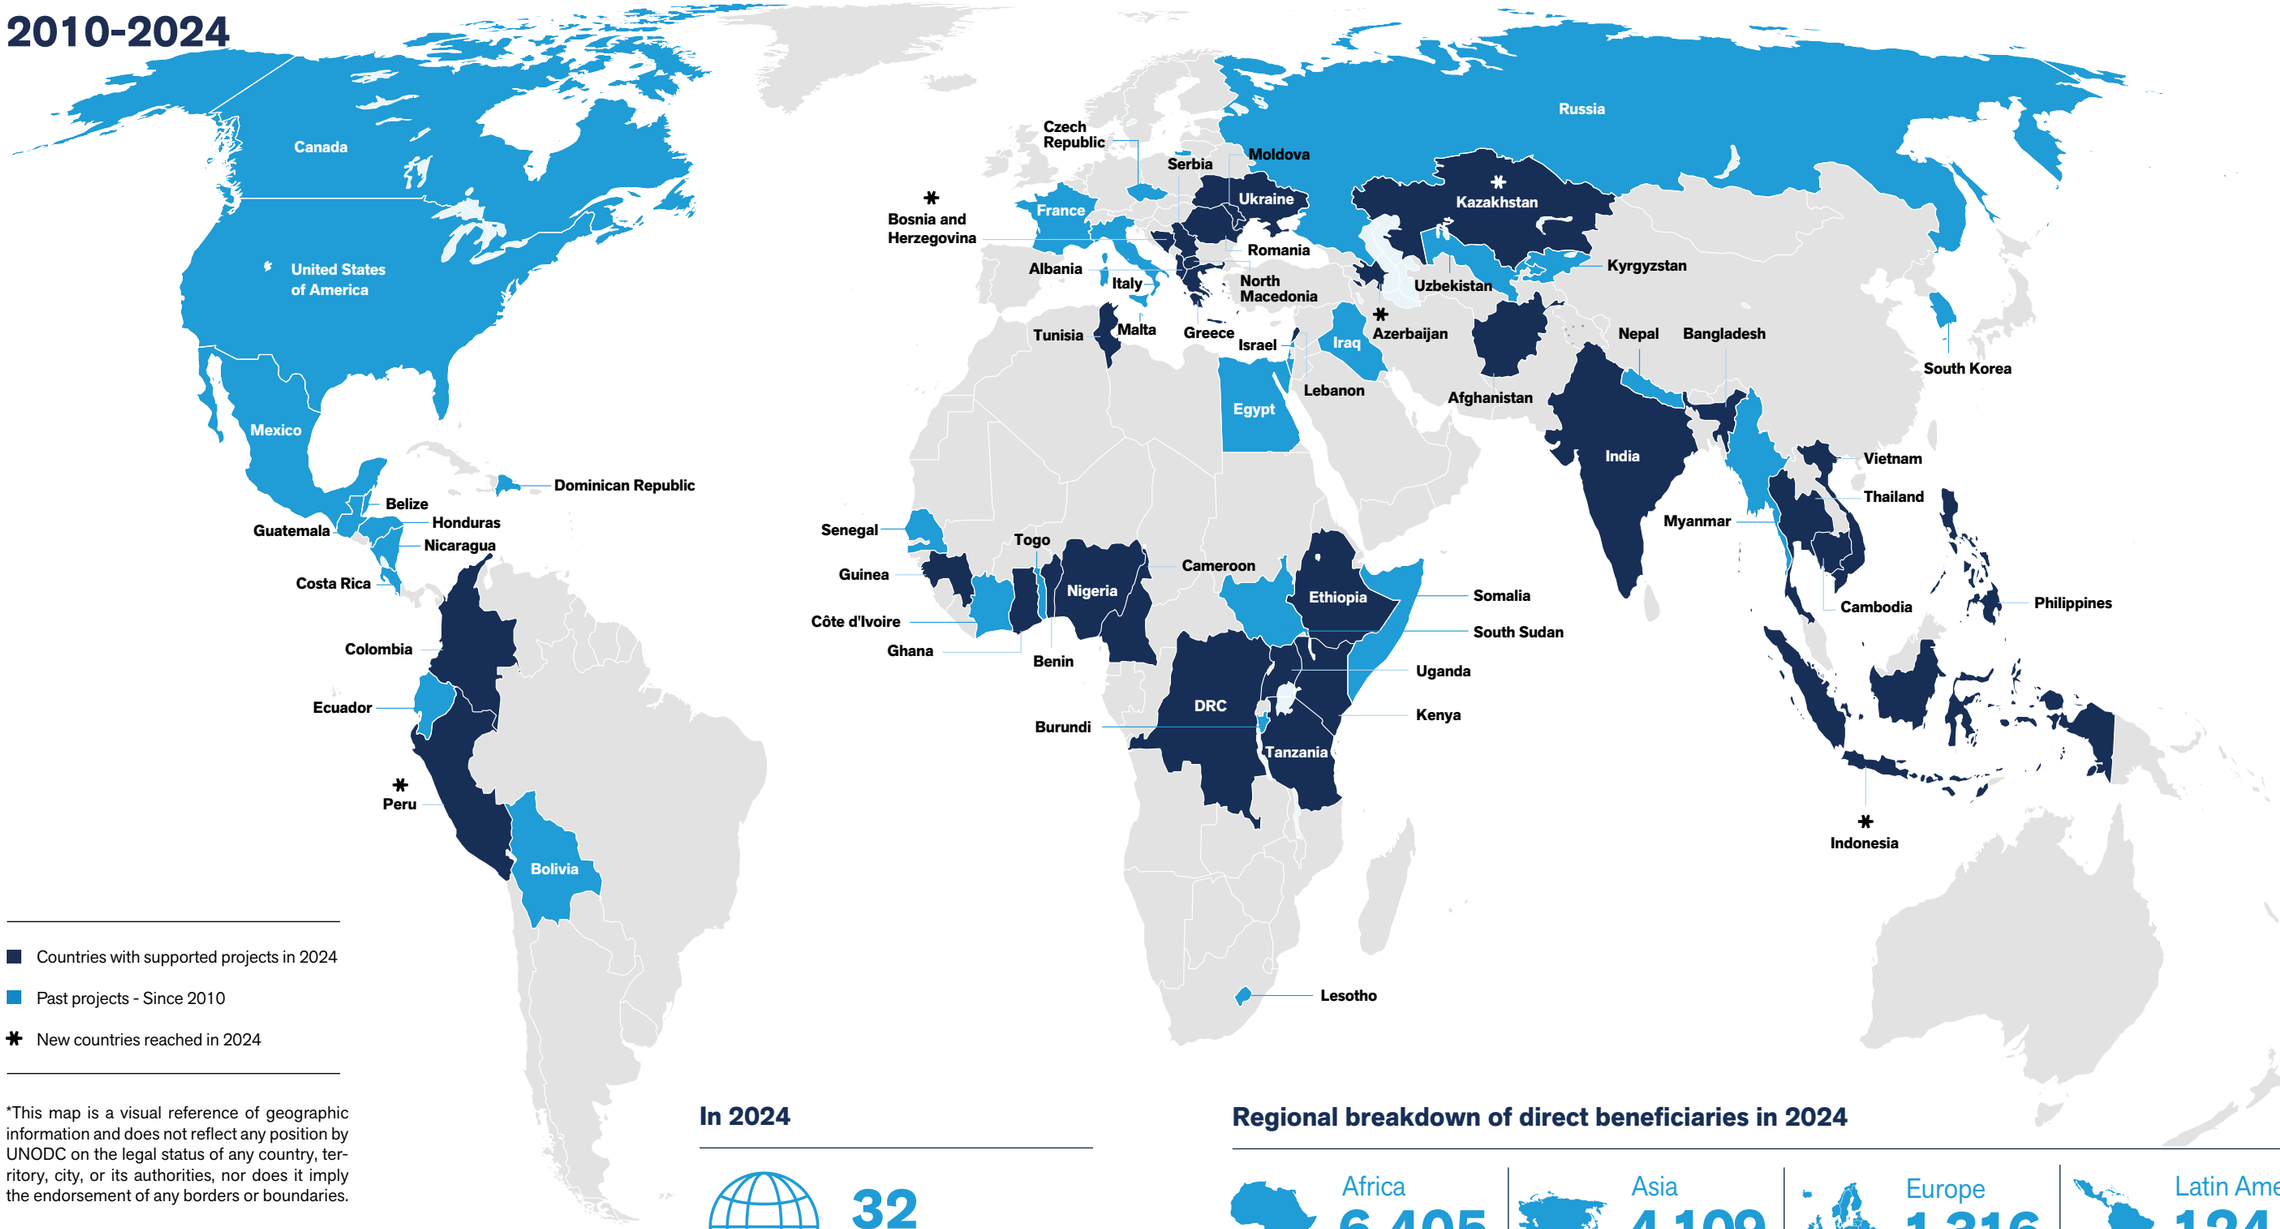

Board members are selected for a three-year term, with due regard to equitable geographical distribution, and in consultation with Member States and the Executive Director of UNODC.

The Board provides strategic advice, fundraising support, and oversight to ensure the Fund remains aligned with its mandate and responsive to the needs of victims.

The first official meeting of the new Board took place in May 2024 in Vienna, where members convened alongside the 33rd Conference of the UN Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice (CCPCJ). Board members also participated in a high-level UNVTF side event during the conference, highlighting the Fund's achievements and strengthening partnerships with Member States and civil society.

Albania

- TJETER VIZION ASSOCIATION
Project supported 20 trafficked minors with shelter, counselling, legal aid, and vocational training, while strengthening early identification and raising awareness among 1,500 people.

- DIFFERENT & EQUAL
Project assisted 83 trafficking victims and their children with shelter, medical care, counselling, legal aid, education, and vocational support, while awareness activities reached over 970 people.

- COUNSELLING LINE FOR WOMEN AND GIRLS
Project supported 285 women and girls, including 33 with disabilities, through capacity-building, psychosocial counselling, technology trainings, legal assistance, and education programmes.

Uganda

- UGANDA YOUTH DEVELOPMENT LINK (UYDEL)
Project supported 60 child victims of trafficking including 37 girls and 23 boys, providing shelter, psychosocial counselling, medical care, vocational training, and start-up packages to strengthen recovery and resilience against re-trafficking.

- DWELLING PLACES
Project supported 174 child victims of trafficking, including 133 girls and 41 boys, with comprehensive rehabilitation, family tracing, and reunification services.

- HOPE FOR JUSTICE
Project supported 10 boys who survived trafficking with shelter, medical care, psychosocial support, education, vocational training, and assistance with family reunification or repatriation.

Azerbaijan

- PUBLIC UNION "CLEAN WORLD" AID TO WOMEN (CWAW)
Project supported 40 female survivors of trafficking, including 15 girls and 25 women, with psychological and legal assistance to strengthen reintegration into society.

Kazakhstan

- LEGAL CENTER FOR WOMEN'S INITIATIVES "SANA SEZIM"
Project supported 80 victims of trafficking and vulnerable migrants, including 2 girls, 3 boys, 20 women and 55 men, with legal aid and social support.

Kenya

- AZADI
Project supported 24 women survivors with psychosocial counselling and capacity-building to strengthen their reintegration and meaningful participation in society.

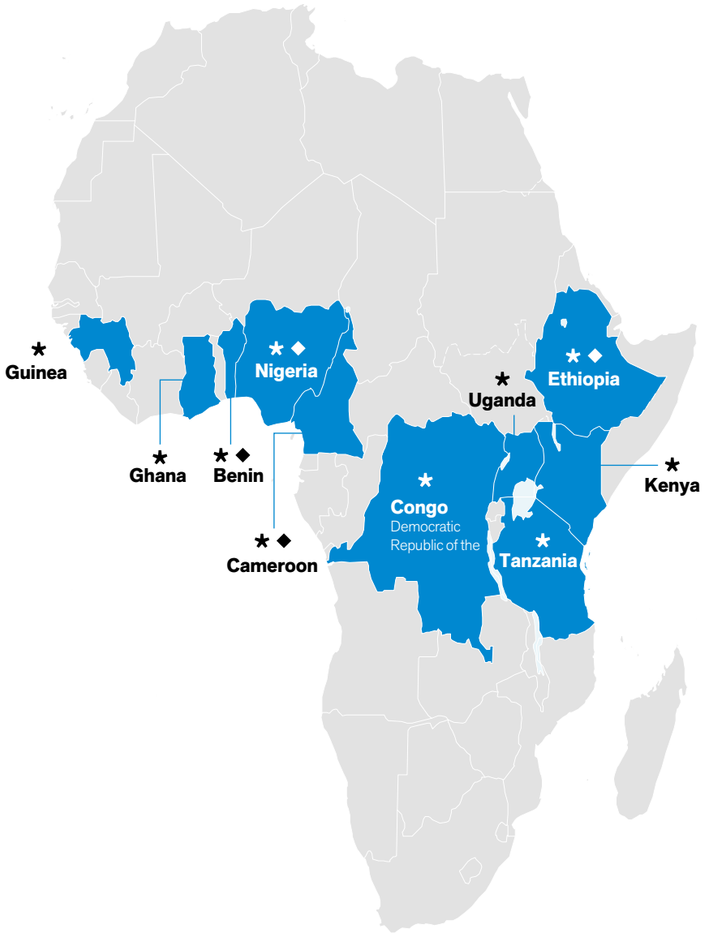

In 2024, UNVTF conducted direct monitoring missions to five countries to assess funded projects. These visits complemented regular online check-ins and provided valuable insights into programme delivery, beneficiary impact, and operational practices on the ground.

Project Highlights from the Field

Good Samaritan Association
Ethiopia

Amid ongoing conflict and displacement in Ethiopia's Amhara Region, GSA implemented a comprehensive project to support 20 trafficked returnee and internally displaced women and their children. The initiative provided safe shelter, medical care, psychosocial counseling, and legal aid, prioritizing highly vulnerable groups such as survivors of sexual violence, pregnant women, and persons with disabilities. Beneficiaries received food, clothing, and essential non-food items to stabilize their living conditions. The project also delivered vocational and business training in areas like catering and entrepreneurship, leading to skills certification and support to launch income-generating activities. Recreational therapy and mental health services contributed to psychosocial recovery, while legal services, delivered in partnership with the Ethiopian Women's Lawyer Association, helped beneficiaries understand and assert their rights. Reintegration support facilitated family reunification and long-term stability. By addressing both emergency needs and long-term recovery, the project significantly reduced re-trafficking risks and promoted self-sufficiency for survivors.

TRACE
Kenya

TRACE Kenya implemented a multi-faceted project in Garissa County to support 89 trafficking survivors with psychosocial care, legal aid, education, vocational training, and family reintegration. The project strengthened and expanded the Garissa Survivors' Network, enabling survivors to raise awareness through peer-led initiatives, community skits, and events such as the World Day Against Trafficking in Persons. Survivors also received shelter and medical support, while ten children benefited from partial education sponsorships.

Legal awareness sessions were conducted to empower survivors to understand their rights and access justice. In collaboration with government agencies, including the Directorate of Criminal Investigations and the Anti-Human Trafficking and Child Protection Unit, several trafficking cases advanced toward prosecution. One high-risk case involved a Kenyan survivor repatriated from Malaysia with severe trauma. Trace Kenya facilitated his support and temporary resettlement after family rejection. Survivors also participated in national dialogues, contributing to the review of the Counter-Trafficking in Persons Act and advocating for inclusion of survivor representation in advisory structures.

Pathfinders Justice Initiative
Nigeria

Pathfinders Justice Initiative in Nigeria supported 65 women survivors of trafficking in Edo State, where high rates of unemployment and inflation have deepened vulnerability to trafficking. Through a comprehensive and survivor-centered approach, the project provided safe shelter, medical care, psychosocial counselling, vocational skills training, start-up capital, and humanitarian support. Beneficiaries were paired with survivor mentors and engaged in workshops on business development, life skills, and self-empowerment. Many successfully launched small businesses in areas such as catering, tailoring, and hair care. The project fostered a strong sense of community and empowerment among participants, leading to measurable improvements in health, well-being, and economic self-sufficiency. Survivors emerged better prepared to navigate life independently and reduce their risk of exploitation, forming a foundation for long-term recovery.

Stories Behind the Grants

A Ball Game and a Second Chance: The First Step Toward Healing for Trafficking Victims

Victims of trafficking often endure severe trauma that deeply impacts how they see themselves, others, and the world around them. Upon arriving at a shelter, many show signs of emotional withdrawal, extreme mistrust, isolation, and in some cases, temporary loss of speech. These are not just behaviors, but survival responses to the dehumanization they've experienced.

At the reception center operated by Agir Pour l'Enfant (APE), in partnership with the UN Voluntary Trust Fund for Victims of Trafficking in Persons (UNVTF), such cases are not uncommon. One particularly striking example involved three recently rescued child victims of trafficking. For the first 48 hours, every attempt to engage with them was met with silence. They avoided eye contact, their bodies were tense, and communication was virtually impossible. Neither the case manager nor the educator could begin a full assessment—the trauma had built an invisible wall.

Understanding the need to first establish a sense of psychological safety, the team introduced a gentle, non-threatening group activity: a simple ball game. Each toss of the ball served as a gentle invitation to speak. Never a demand, just a chance. This playful, indirect method encouraged connection on the children's own terms, creating a space where trust could begin to form.

After about an hour, something shifted. The children started to share small pieces of their stories, hesitant at first, but meaningful. These early fragments gave the team crucial insight into their emotional and physical needs, including psychological care, reintegration planning, or stronger protective measures.

The activity became not just a game, but a gateway to healing. It marked the beginning of reconnecting with their identity, reclaiming control over their story, and entering a space where their dignity was recognized.

This approach, rooted in active listening, trust-building, and emotional safety, is at the core of APE's methodology. It empowers survivors to move from silence toward recovery, at their own pace.

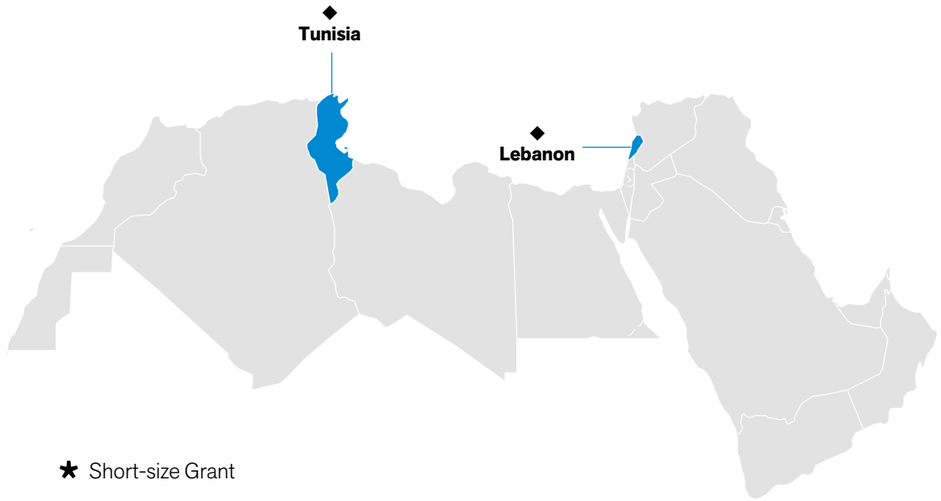

Thanks to the support of UNVTF, APE can continue creating these safe and essential spaces for the most vulnerable, where healing begins one small step at a time.

Agir Pour l'Efant (APE) received two rounds of funding support from the UN Voluntary Trust Fund for Victims of Trafficking in Persons (UNVTF) through its eight and ninth-grant cycle. They will continue implementing their current project 'Access of vulnerable children and women to prevention services and direct protection responses in the rural communes of Gouecke, Yalenzou, Bounoums and urban commune of N'Zerekore' till end of December 2025.

Médecins du Monde
Tunisia

In a context marked by both internal and cross-border trafficking, Médecins du Monde's project in Tunisia aims to assist 200 victims through a combination of direct support and community-based interventions. Targeting children, women, and migrants, particularly those affected by displacement and irregular migration, the project provides mobile psychosocial and medical care, legal referrals, hygiene kits, and reintegration support. Operating in partnership with the National Anti-Trafficking Authority, the project also strengthens victim identification and referral mechanisms through capacity-building for frontline actors, including peer educators and institutional stakeholders. To encourage prevention and inclusion, community engagement activities and outreach patrols are conducted regularly. Between December 2023 and June 2024, over 100 potential victims received psychosocial or medical support, and 12 individuals were referred for specialized legal, social, or psychological services. The project plays a vital role in bridging gaps in protection and coordinating multi-actor responses for holistic, survivor-centered care.

Amel Association International
Lebanon

Amel Association supported 68 victims of human trafficking, primarily migrant domestic workers, through a wide range of direct services. Victims received medical care, psychosocial support, voluntary return assistance, and participated in three empowerment training cycles covering health, creative arts, and vocational skills. Products made during the sessions were sold through Amel's shop, generating income for participants. Additional support included legal referrals, hygiene kits, school supplies, rent and food assistance, and shelter referrals. Awareness and capacity-building efforts included training for frontline workers, a national conference for 30 stakeholders, outreach in prisons reaching 300 detainees, and campaigns on trafficking risks. Amel also advocated for systemic change by working with a national consortium to end the Kafala system. Through coordinated and survivor-centered efforts, the project helped strengthen protection and reintegration pathways for trafficking victims.

Stories Behind the Grants

Beaten, Trafficked, and Displaced: Ahmed & Nasser's Story of Survival

Two young men, Ahmed (19) and Nasser (15) sit beside one another and recount their stories. Ahmed's voice trembles as he recounts the abuse they suffered. Their journeys closely resemble one another: as children, they were both trafficked into Libyan militia groups after being forced from their homes in Somalia.

Ahmed is originally from Mogadishu but no longer has any family. His father was killed in front of him by Al-Shabaab terrorist militias when he refused to give up one of his sons to fight. "My mother gave me some money to flee the house and avoid suffering the same fate as my father," he shares. He left for Kenya and found a job with a truck driver. He worked for the driver for two months, but the work was arduous. "I was still a teenager at the time, and they gave [me] very heavy loads to put in the truck. All [I] earned was enough to eat and sleep, nothing else," Ahmed says.

He eventually reached South Sudan, where he worked as a waiter for three months in a café before some of his acquaintances suggested he go to Libya for a better job. "The transporter asked me for $100 to take me there, and everyone told me it was a good place to work, so I took my savings and left," Ahmed explains. But the transporter turned out to be a trafficker. As soon as he arrived in Libya, Ahmed was handed over to militias who demanded a ransom of $1,500. "I was being beaten every day; it was in Koufrah, in southeast Libya. I ended up offering them work since I couldn't get that money, so they put me in the kitchen. That allowed me to survive." His friend Nasser had the same experience being captured by militias, unable to pay ransom.

After two years trapped in Koufrah, Ahmed escaped and traveled on foot to Tripoli. He contracted a skin disease and suffered for three months. In fear of being reimprisoned, Ahmed fled Libya with others for Tunisia via the Algerian Sahara. He arrived at the same time as his friend Nasser, who fell extremely ill. After helping Nasser get hospitalized, they went to Tunis together to find work.

Despite being fluent in English, Ahmed struggles to find a job. For now, they live together in Jbel Lahmar, a working-class neighborhood of Tunis. Still, he shares, "It's really difficult. We have the impression that people don't want us… I don't want to go to sea like many migrants do here, I just want to find a job. I would even like to resume my studies, [since] I was only 14 when I left my country."

Both Nasser and Ahmed are now getting assistance from Médecins du Monde (MDM), where they have access to medical services, psychological care, and reintegration pathways. MDM, a three-time UN Voluntary Trust Fund grantee, helps victims of trafficking like Nasser and Ahmed as well as other vulnerable populations in Tunisia. With the help of UNVTF, MDM recently completed its most recent project, called "PROMESS: Protection of Victims of Trafficking and Awareness and Mobilization of Communities and Survivors" in June 2025.

Project Highlights from the Field

Pragya
India

This project supports 300 survivors of forced labor and sexual exploitation, focusing on tribal women and girls in Rajasthan and West Bengal, two high-risk trafficking corridors. Survivors are provided with psychological, psychosocial, and legal counseling, along with vocational training aimed at improving their resilience, employability, and reintegration. The project operates through local socio-legal help centers, a mobile app for access to services, and trained survivor groups that identify others in need. Survivors participate in empowerment and life-skills workshops and are linked to certified vocational training programs. Public outreach includes awareness campaigns, advocacy with government officials, and coordination with local institutions to strengthen protection systems. Through a trauma-informed and rights-based approach, the project addresses both urgent recovery and long-term empowerment of survivors in deeply vulnerable communities.

Tambayan Center for Children's Rights
Philippines

This project provides targeted assistance to 20 victims of trafficking, focusing on children and women affected by online sexual exploitation, including individuals from marginalized ethnic communities such as the Sama-Bajau. Operating in Davao City, the initiative strengthens victim identification and response mechanisms through collaboration with local anti-trafficking bodies, law enforcement, and tourism operators. Survivors receive psychological, psychosocial, and health support, along with vocational training, livelihood assistance, and life skills education, including creative arts workshops. The project also builds capacity among frontliners and service providers in trauma-informed care, aiming to reduce re-victimization and improve long-term resilience. By addressing both prevention and recovery, Tambayan's approach supports survivors on their path to healing and reintegration.

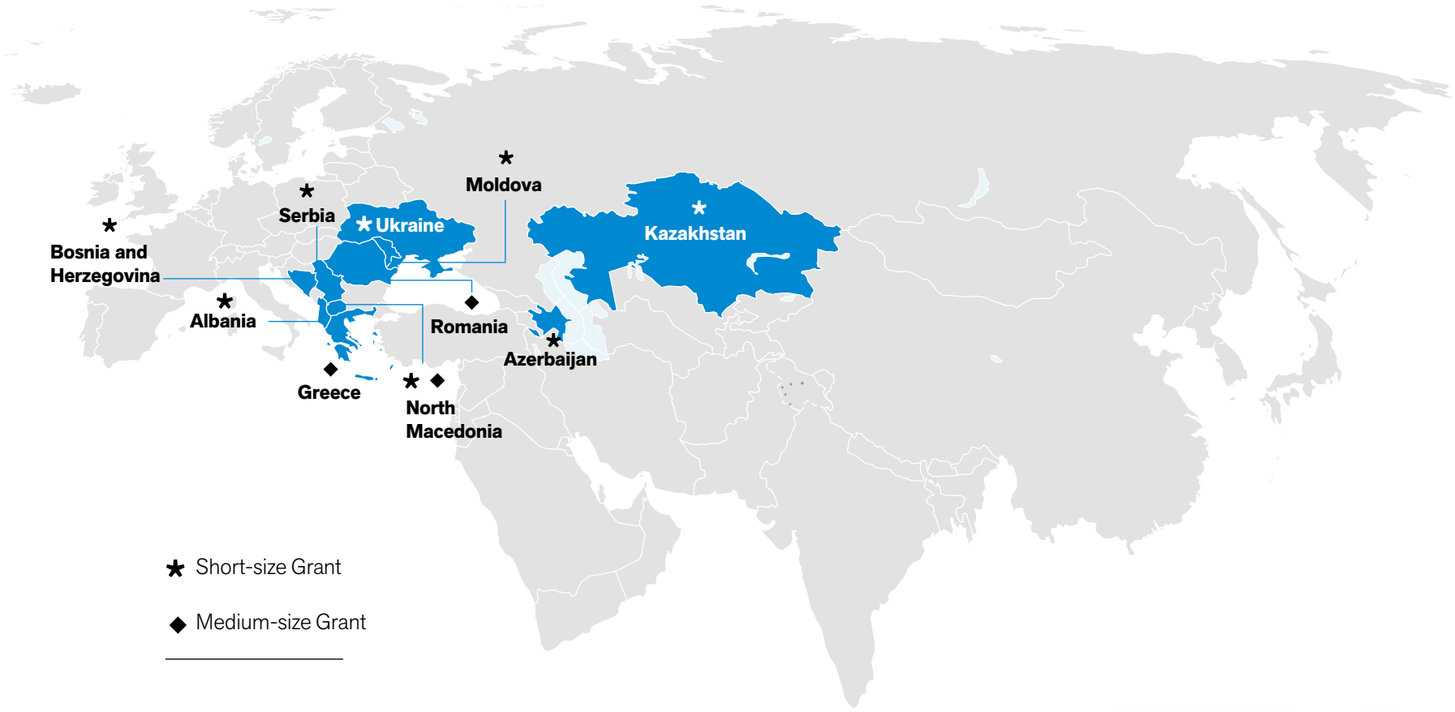

Pacific Links Foundation
Vietnam

This 20-month project supports 150 trafficking survivors in Vietnam, particularly women, children, and ethnic minorities, with a focus on those exploited through forced criminality by organized crime groups. Drawing on feedback from over 1,800 survivors, the initiative addresses critical reintegration gaps through early victim identification, financial empowerment, and survivor-centered care. Assistance includes safe shelter, medical and dental care, legal support, psychosocial counseling, and vocational training tailored to each survivor's needs. Survivors receive career guidance, support to attend certified training courses, and help finding employment. They also have access to an online learning platform that includes practical resources on safe migration, financial literacy, and basic English, helping reduce their risk of re-trafficking. The project further offers assistance with family reunification and repatriation. By combining direct services with survivor-informed approaches, the project empowers victims to rebuild their lives with safety, dignity, and independence.

Association "Women from Una"
Bosnia and Herzegovina

Operating in a context of limited state capacity and increased migration flows, this project supported 16 identified and potential victims of trafficking, primarily minors, through safe accommodation, medical care, psychosocial and psychological support, legal counselling, and education. The Association, which manages the only shelter for trafficking victims in the Una-Sana Canton, also reached 144 at-risk children through its day care services and informed over 500 refugees and migrants in reception centers about trafficking risks. Awareness-raising activities included extensive media coverage, radio announcements, social media posts, and a high-level conference marking Human Rights Day with 80 stakeholders. The project played a critical role in providing specialized care to trafficking survivors and strengthening multisectoral responses to the issue.

Tjeter Vizion Association
Albania

Tjeter Vizion Association implemented a year-long initiative supporting 20 survivors of human trafficking, primarily minors, through a holistic model combining identification, referral, protection, and reintegration. With the support of a mobile unit operating in eight regions across central and southeastern Albania, the project significantly enhanced early identification efforts, leading to the referral of 15 minor victims to national authorities. Survivors received individualized assistance including psychosocial counselling, medical and legal support, and family mediation, with 19 minors accommodated in the organization's specialized shelter.

Tailored vocational training and career coaching helped older minors pursue professional education and reintegration into the labor market. The project also ran widespread awareness campaigns, reaching over 1,500 individuals including students, professionals, and community members. Tjeter Vizion's longstanding collaboration with local anti-trafficking actors and child protection units contributed to the sustainability of the intervention and improved response mechanisms for trafficking cases across Albania.

Light of Hope
Ukraine

Light of Hope, operating in the Poltava region of Ukraine, implemented a comprehensive project to support 60 women and children affected by human trafficking, mainly labor exploitation. The initiative, carried out amidst the ongoing war and humanitarian crisis, responded to the heightened vulnerabilities caused by mass displacement, economic collapse, and weakened local institutions. Over a 12-month period, the project focused on identifying victims, assessing their needs, and delivering psychological, legal, and material support tailored to individual cases. Additionally, the project worked to strengthen local capacity by organizing expert consultations and training sessions for authorities to improve procedures for victim identification and referral. All beneficiaries were supported through state-mandated protection and reintegration services. The project addressed significant gaps in awareness and service provision in a region heavily impacted by conflict and migration.

Capital Humano y Social Alternativo (CHSA)
Peru

This survivor-led organization aims to support more than 100 victims of human trafficking across Lima, Cusco, Puno, Madre de Dios, and Loreto. The project provides legal and psychosocial support, emergency assistance, including food, shelter, and medical care, and referrals to specialized services. Victims also receive educational reintegration and vocational support, including entrepreneurship assistance, life planning, and skills development. Furthermore, community-based activities strengthen the capacity of migrant-led organizations within the country to identify, refer, and assist victims, supported by user-friendly materials outlining available protection pathways. The project also trains over 300 government health professionals and frontline staff to deliver trauma-informed, victim-centered services. Through close coordination with public institutions, the initiative addresses service gaps, improves referral systems, and contributes to a more effective national response for both Peruvian and migrant survivors.

Corporación Espacios de Mujer
Colombia

With a 24-month grant of USD 58,000, this project supports 30 victims of human trafficking, including women, men, LGBTIQ+ individuals, internally displaced persons, and migrants, through direct assistance that improves health, well-being, and social reintegration, while preventing re-trafficking.

Applying a victim-centered approach, the initiative ensures that survivors receive timely information about available services and are empowered to lead their own recovery. Through therapeutic, social, and financial support, victims are reintegrated into their communities with dignity and autonomy. The project also strengthens early detection mechanisms in collaboration with public institutions and promotes the development of inclusive public policies. By enhancing institutional presence in Medellín and the department of Antioquia, a region with high internal trafficking rates, the initiative ensures faster and more effective protection and care for vulnerable groups.

Side Event at the 33rd Conference of the UN Commission on

Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice (CCPCJ)

Vienna, May 2024

At the 33rd session of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice (CCPCJ), held in Vienna in May 2024, UNVTF organized a dedicated side event to emphasize its impact and amplify the voices of survivors and frontline organizations. The event, titled "Leaving No Victims Behind: Impact of the United Nations Voluntary Trust Fund for Victims of Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children", brought together Member States, UN officials, civil society, and youth to reflect on the Fund's role in delivering life-changing support to victims of trafficking worldwide.

Supported by Andorra, Australia, France, Germany, Liechtenstein, Malta, the Philippines, Qatar, Spain, and Sweden, the event gathered Member States, UN representatives, civil society, and students to spotlight the stories behind the statistics and the human impact of UNVTF-funded initiatives.

The event opened with a welcome address from Mr. Jean-Luc Lemahieu, Director of UNODC's Division for Policy Analysis and Public Affairs, who underscored the critical importance of ensuring access to protection and assistance for all victims of trafficking.

Mr. Flavio Mirella, Chief of the Co-Financing and Partnerships Section and Manager of the UNVTF, introduced the Fund's global grants mechanism and co-moderated the discussion with Ms. Victoria Nyanjura, Chair of the UNVTF Board and Founder of Women in Action for Women (Uganda).

Attendees were introduced to the newly appointed members of the UNVTF Board.

Several UNVTF-funded NGOs also shared their experiences from the field. Corporación Espacios de Mujer (Colombia) presented its work on survivor-centered rehabilitation, Urban Light (Thailand) highlighted its support to exploited boys and young men, and ASTRA (Serbia) spoke about grassroots advocacy and long-term reintegration strategies.

The event concluded with a statement of support delivered by students from the Vienna International School, offering a powerful reminder of the role of youth in shaping a future free from exploitation.

Acknowledgements and Contributions

OUR DONORS

Behind every survivor assisted through the UN Voluntary Trust Fund for Victims of Trafficking in Persons stands a network of committed donors and partners. Their contributions make it possible to deliver urgent, life-changing support to the most vulnerable - those recovering from the trauma of trafficking and exploitation.

UNVTF-funded projects offer more than just assistance. They offer hope. With donor support, we enable local organizations across the globe to provide survivors with access to safe shelter, legal protection, psychosocial care, education, and skills training. These are the building blocks of lasting recovery and reintegration.

Our work would not be possible without the trust and generosity of our donors, who share our vision of a world where no victim is left behind. Together, we are transforming lives and strengthening the global response to human trafficking.

CONTRIBUTIONS AND PLEDGES

In 2024, the UNVTF mobilized a total of US$ 1,063,790 from a diverse group of donors, including Member States, private sector partners, and individual donors.

While this represents continued and critical support, it remains below the Board of Trustees' annual target of US$ 2 million, which is the funding level deemed necessary to sustain a predictable and stable grant-making process that can meet the growing demand from civil society organizations working on the frontlines.

A detailed list of donors and contributors is available in the annexes of this report.

GRANTS AND EXPENDITURES

UNODC manages the Trust Fund through Project GLOX42, which supports both the grants programme and the Trust Fund's operational needs.

According to the 2024 Certified Financial Statement, the total disbursements for active NGO projects amounted to US$ 759,215. These funds enabled the delivery of essential services to victims of trafficking in more than 30 countries.

In addition to project grants, the Trust Fund covered necessary expenditures related to oversight, monitoring, and operational management. As per UN Financial Regulations and the Fund's Terms of Reference, a 13% programme support cost (PSC) was applied to all annual expenditures to cover UN administrative and support services.

The Way Forward

As we move into 2025, the global need for protection and assistance for victims of human trafficking remains as urgent as ever. Millions of people around the world are currently trapped in situations of human trafficking, facing exploitation through violence, deception, and coercion. Organized criminal networks continue to prey on the world's most vulnerable, particularly women, children, and unaccompanied minors, exploiting desperation and the search for safety and opportunity.

As new and evolving forms of trafficking continue to emerge, the role of the UN Voluntary Trust Fund for Victims of Trafficking in Persons is more critical than ever. Now entering its 15th year, the Trust Fund stands as a unique and survivor-centered mechanism dedicated to empowering victims and strengthening the frontline response.

Yet, our ability to respond depends entirely on the level of financial support we receive. As the number of identified victims continues to grow, so does the demand from civil society organizations seeking to assist them. Without sufficient funding, we risk turning away vital projects that could transform lives.

Looking ahead, we remain committed to strengthening existing partnerships and forging new ones, ensuring that the Fund's work continues to reach all regions and that organizations everywhere are aware of the support we provide. We will continue to raise the visibility of the Fund, advocating for its mission and expanding its voice so that we can reach more frontline NGOs working directly with victims and strengthen support where it is needed most. At the same time, we will not only monitor and assess the projects we support, but also work closely with grantees to offer both financial assistance and capacity-building support.

Creativity and innovation will remain at the heart of our approach, as we collaborate with our partners to deliver impactful, adaptable solutions in a rapidly evolving global landscape. As always, our priorities will be guided by the strategic leadership of our Board of Trustees, whose commitment to accountability and impact ensures that our work remains grounded, inclusive, and survivor-focused.

We hope that our donors, both current and new, will continue to stand with us. With their partnership, we can ensure that more survivors are reached, more futures are restored, and that no victim is left behind.
